JABOTINSKY

"... When I die, bury me where I die, and do not take my remains to Eretz Israel except at the command of the Hebrew government of a liberated Eretz Israel."

Next Thursday, on Jerusalem's Mt. Herzl, exactly twenty-four years after his sudden demise, the earthly remains of Vladimir Jabotinsky, one of the greatest Jews who ever lived, will be interred in the holy soil.

The old soldier who succumbed on the battlefield finally will be brought home. And this ingathering among his people will be just as he had predicted.

* * * *

There seems to be a pattern preordained for those destined to lead nations. Those who conceive the ideals that move men, that change history, never live to see their dream fulfilled.

We need only read the story of Moses, first and greatest of all leaders of the People of Israel, to detect this clue to one of the mysteries in the history of mankind. Also, it seems that the moulders of nations inevitably must fight their Korahs. This too was Jabotinsky's lot.

Like some among the greatest, he came from a circle far from the ghetto and its mentality. To him the Jewish revolution was a simple proposition and an obvious necessity in order to change Jewish history.

* * * *

The fiery leader never had doubted that Judea would be reborn; that it would rise again in blood and fire; that his children whom he had taught to fight for the liberation of the ancient homeland would free it from foreign yoke; and that those who had opposed him while alive — who had feared him, his intransigeant, clear program — would place obstacles in the path of his last homeward journey; but, that finally the government would bring him to rest with the fathers of the nation.

* * * *

Because official history is written usually by those in power, many among the new generation either know very little about Jabotinsky or else see a distorted image.

Jabotinsky dared foresee the imminence of the holocaust. But he also proclaimed the way to salvation.

* * * *

In my early youth, at a press conference during the Zionist Congress in Prague, Czechoslovakia, (several months after Hitler's rise to power) I heard him issue the first warning against complacency vis-à-vis Nazi Germany:

We have exactly six months to save the German Jews, and European Jewry in general. At the moment, the civilized world is shocked by Hitler's antisemitism. But, unless we fight for our very lives NOW, the world will accept a ghetto for the Jew — and we will be lost.

Jabotinsky was impatient with those who negotiated with the lower echelon of German officials. Pitying the Jew who begged for mercy, he called for a renascence of the Maccabean spirit. He predicted that Jewish liberty — like the liberation of any people or group — would not be given, but taken. For no negotiations could force England to abandon its strategic position in Palestine.

He loved the English people — the English tradition of fair play — but knew that British imperialistic policies in Palestine, as elsewhere, would not be reversed by talk.

To a certain degree, Jabotinsky was the forerunner of the anticolonialist revolutions in Asia and Africa.

* * * *

In 1938, formulating the most daring plan ever conceived, he successfully negotiated a deal with the Polish government wherein the Poles would allow Jews to march out of the country towards Palestine.

More than three-million Polish Jews were living in misery; and they were threatened by Germany's oncoming slaughter. Traveling from town to town, from hamlet to hamlet, he pleaded with them:

You are trapped. You have nothing to lose. You must dramatize your position by starting the march. Let border guards shoot at you, they can't kill millions. Go — or you will perish in Europe.

His opponents ridiculed him. Furthermore, they attacked him for undermining the so-called theoretical rights of the Jews in Poland. And this, mind you, was but a few months before the calamity began.

* * * *

With Jabotinsky in the lead, his disciples of the Irgun were active in both Poland and other Eastern European countries, smuggling Jews into Palestine.

He was the father of the "Illegal Aliyah" which (at the Geneva Zionist Congress in 1939, held a few days before World War II erupted and the Polish Jews were sealed within the borders of Fortress Europe) an American Zionist leader dared attack as "an immigration of gigolos and prostitutes."

* * * *

I recall vividly Jabotinsky's final days in New York. He was sad; he feared the worst. His last address was an appeal to American Jews to take revolutionary measures, to help create a Jewish army which would fight on the side of the Allies against Hitler. But he always was overruled by the Establishment.

Providence, which prevented him from witnessing the rebirth of Israel, in Its grace, spared him the agony of seeing the destruction of his people, the European Jews.

VLADIMIR JABOTINSKY

JABOTINSKY COMES HOME

Vladimir Jabotinsky, one of the greats of Zion, founder of the first Jewish army of modern times, the World War I Jewish Legion, who died in 1940 at the Camp Betar in Hunter, New York, will be reintered in Jerusalem this coming Thursday, July 7.

Jabotinsky's remains are brought to Israel following a Cabinet decision of the Israeli government proposed by Premier Levi Eshkol. According to predictions, the funeral will be one of the most impressive that any Jewish community has ever witnessed.

The President, the Prime Minister of Israel, the Chief Rabbis, the leaders of the Herut Party (the successor to the Revisionist Party founded by Jabotinsky), the former Irgun Zvai Leumi soldiers, Cabinet ministers, members of Parliament, and thousands of the great leader's followers from the four corners of the earth will participate in the funeral procession from the Lydda airport to Moun Herzl.

AN ASSIMILATED JEW

Vladimir Jabotinsky was born in Odessa, Russia, in 1880, into a culturally assimilated though observant Jewish family. He was educated in Russian schools in Odessa. From his early youth he manifested an unusual literary talent and upon graduation from high school in 1918 was sent to Berne, Switzerland, as a foreign correspondent for the Odessky Listok. Later he was transferred to Rome and became a staff correspondent for the important daily paper Odesskiye Novosti. His pen-name on essays was Altalena and made him famous throughout Russia. While in Rome he became an editorial writer for the socialist Italian paper Avanti.

In1903, after the Kishinev pogrom, Jabotinsky became active in Jewish affairs.

FULL & COMPLETE ACCORD

FRANCE-ISRAEL TIE SOLID

Eshkol visit an unqualified, immediate triumph

By Our Diplomatic Correspondent

PARIS (CJN). — Israel Prime Minister Levi Eshkol has scored another resounding diplomatic victory — a solid understanding with France.

The French press has gone all out in unanimously hailing Mr. Eshkol's visit to the French capital, officially described as a private visit but right from the start bearing all the signs of unstinting cordiality.

PRIVATE ENTENTE CORDIALE

One newspaper opined that if this was a private visit then it has resulted in the most private entente cordiale in modern history.

Following a warm welcome from General Charles de Gaulle, on Monday, Mr. Eshkol and his party of aides attended press, radio and television conferences and interviews. There was wide TV coverage of the arrival.

Thousands of ordinary Frenchmen saluted at the sight of the Eshkol party's blue and white Israeli flags.

ISRAEL'S STRATEGIC POSITION

On Tuesday Mr. Eshkol conferred with Prime Minister Pompidou, but even before that his first private conference had been with French Foreign Minister Couve de Murville, which was attended by French Minister of Defence M. Messner.

The immediacy of the latter conference underlined the fact that the principal topic of the discussion during the French visit is Israel's strategic position. French military and foreign affairs experts participated in most negotiations.

SOLID TIE REAFFIRMED

The upshot of all these rounds of negotiations has been a solid reaffirmation of French friendship and support for Israel. Predictions this spring of a disintegration of the Franco-Israeli tie, in favour of French fence mending with the Arab states, have been proven utterly without foundation. (See editorial this issue.)

UNDERSTAND ISRAEL—U.S. LINK

The diplomatic triumph of the Eshkol visit has been almost as important as the strategic and military one. General de Gaulle made it quite plain to Mr. Eshkol that Israel's heavy dependence on U.S. diplomatic support was well understood in France and, despite Franco-U.S. differences, this would not restrain French goodwill and support.

The two leaders also had candid discussions on the prospects of an Arab-Israel peace. General de Gaulle looked upon the latter as vital to ultimate settlement of the complicated diplomatic picture.

UJWF OPENS CAMPAIGN

HEAD TORONTO'S DEFICIT DRIVE FOR JEWISH SCHOOLS

Toronto's United Jewish Welfare Fund will conduct a One-Time Jewish Education Deficit Campaign during the next three months, John D. Fienberg, president, told this week The Canadian Jewish News.

Mark A. Levy and J. Irving Oelbaum will be the honourary co-chairmen of the campaign, Mr. Fienberg added.

The campaign will raise funds to meet the current deficits of nine all-day and afternoon schools subsidized by the Welfare Fund.

Mr. Fienberg pointed out that it is necessary to run this special fund-raising drive at this time in order to prepare for the implementation of a new "Formula for Subsidy." This formula was adopted last week by the UJWF board of directors following a two-year-period of intensive study by a Welfare Fund Committee in co-operation with the schools.

The new formula is intended to effect economies in school operations:

(1) through more efficient administrative procedures in the schools;

MARK A. LEVY

J. I. OELBAUM

(2) by increasing income from tuition fees; and

(3) by eliminating multiple deficit fund-raising by the schools and incorporating these efforts into the annual United Jewish Appeal campaign.

Under the new formula, tuition fees will be set at the actual cost of operating and maintaining the schools. The United Jewish Welfare Fund will continue to give subsidies through the Bureau of Jewish Education, but only for those students whose parents cannot afford full tuition fee.

Schools which will benefit from the campaign are: Associated Hebrew Schools, Bais Yehuda, Beach Hebrew Institute, Bialik Hebrew Day School, Borochov Schools, Eitz Chaim Schools, Jewish National Workers' Alliance Schools, Mildred Arnoff Memorial School (Beth Sholom), Workmen Circle Peretz School and Yeshiva Shlomei Emunei Israel.

VATICAN & JEWS

AJC DEFENDS STAND

NEW YORK (CJN). — The American Jewish Committee declared that its program for advancing Catholic-Jewish relations at the Vatican's Ecumenical Council had been carried out "in consultation with prominent Orthodox, Conservative and Reform rabbis and theologians."

The committee's assertion was in reply to criticism by Orthodox rabbis at the recent convention of the Rabbinical Council of America in Fallsburg, N. Y. The rabbis were especially critical of the Committee's role in Jewish-Catholic relations.

Morris B. Abram, president of the committee, said his agency had submitted three memorando to a preparatory commission of the Vatican Ecumenical Council "after consultation with eminent scholars and rabbis representing Orthodox, Conservative and Reform viewpoints."

Mr. Abram did not give the names of the Rabbis consulted.

In essence, these memorando, had been requested by Vatican officials, focused on distorted teachings about Jews and Judaism in Catholic textbooks, liturgy and commentaries that were seen as contributing to anti-Semitic attitudes, the Committee said.

The memoranda were discussed at a meeting at the Committee's headquartes here last year with Augustin Cardinal Bea, head of the Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity.

Also present at the meeting, Mr. Abram said, were faculty members of the Jewish Theological Seminary, a Conservative institution, as well as "leaders of other branches of Judaism."

Mr. Abram placed particular stress on his agency's interreligious program, which he said "arises out of the long-felt need to remove the basis of the false accusation against the Jewish people of collective responsibility for the Crucifixion which has been an underlying source of hostility to the Jew for almost two milennia, resulting in untold suffering and martyrdom."

Mr. Abram also emphasized that the committee's work in the area of Catholic-Jewish relations had drawn upon "the expertise of scholars and leaders who have made important contributions to the cause of Christian-Jewish relations in various parts of the world."

CEMETERY DESECRATED IN HOLLAND

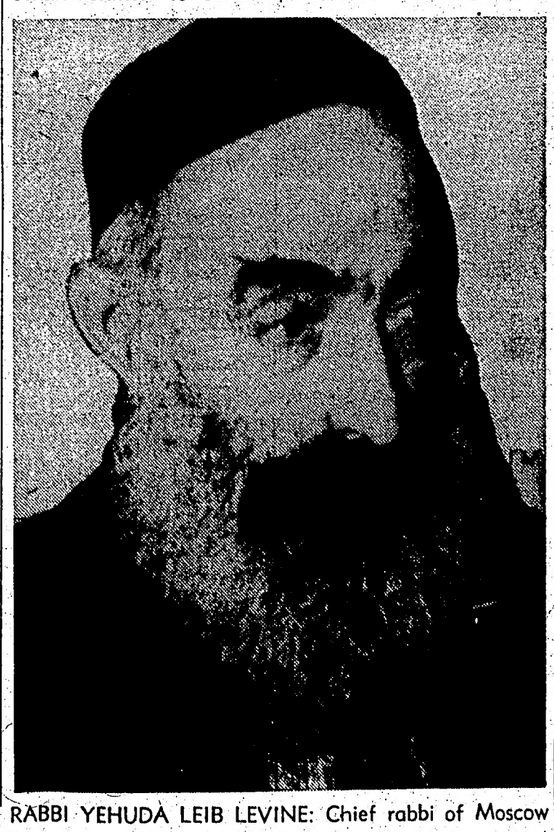
AMSTERDAM (JCNS) — The Jewish cemetery of Wintersjik, a townlet in Eastern Holland on the German border, was found to have been desecrated last night. Twelve tombstones had been overturned and daubed with swastikas and the Dutch words: "You will be wiped out".

The police are investigating.

Wintersjik had a flourising Jewish community before the war, but today only 28 Jews live there.

Moscow Rabbi Declines Talmud Gift

MONTREAL — Rabbi J. L. Levin, Rabbi of Moscow and Dean of the Yeshiva, in a communication to Michael Garber, Q.C., president of Canadian Jewish Congress, refused an offer to receive a set of Talmud for use of the students at Moscow Yeshiva.



RABBI YEHUDA LEIB LEVINE: Chief rabbi of Moscow

The text of his letter, originally written in Hebrew, and dated Moscow, June 12, 1964, reads as follows:

"My hearty thanks for the gift which you are ready to send to us for the students of the Yeshiva, so that they should study Torah from your copy of the Talmud.

"This is a gracious gesture on your part and if we were in need of such important help as this, this by itself would be very important. I have to advise you, however, that we have plenty of books to study from and even more than we need, thank God. In my estimation, there is no necessity to send your copy of the Talmud to us.

"Therefore I have to ask you not to trouble, Sir, and not to send the Talmud to our Yeshiva in Moscow.

"With the blessing for the lifting up of the Torah's prestige and peace all over the world, I remain, (Signed) J. L. Levin, Rabbi of Moscow and Dean of the Yeshiva".

The offer to send a set of Talmud was originally made by Mr. Garber in a follow-up letter to the one sent congratulating Rabbi Levin on his 70th birthday on behalf of Canadian Jewry.

SYNAGOGUE NAMED FOR SHAZAR

JERUSALEM (JCNS) — Sir Isaac Wolfson, British commercial magnate, is providing the funds for a synagogue at Kfar Habad to be named in honour of President Shazar. The cornerstone was laid a week ago Monday. The President is a member of the Habad Chasidim.

Mr. Shazar is also involved in another synagogue project — the construction of a President's prayer-house for private services which, at his request, is to be built in the grounds of Beit Hanassi, the official residence of the President, on which work is to start this year.

There were some left-wing protests that no President had the right to impose his own way of life on his successors, but the President's office pointed out that the prayer-house would be built with funds provided from unofficial sources. A leading British industrialist has already offered his support.

FUEL TO "DEPUTY" FLAME?

NEW LIGHT ON PIUS XII ROLE

by Richard Yaffe

In a book which will probably add fuel to the controversy begun by Rolf Hochhuth's play "The Representative", Professor Guenter Lewy declares that it was the Vatican that initiated the negotiations for the 1933 Concordat and not Hitler, as has been generally assumed, and that the Catholic Church willingly collaborated with the Nazis, if only its special group interests could be left undisturbed. "The Representative" accuses Pope Pius XII of silence during the Nazi extermination of the Jews.

In "The Catholic Church and Nazi Germany", published on June 15, by McGraw-Hill, Professor Lewy quotes from sources now available as the result of the capture of large quantities of German state and party documents by the Allies and the opening of some church archives.

He offers documentary evidence that those Catholics who resisted the Nazi regime were in effect rebels not only against the state but also against their own church authorities who urged complete loyalty to Hitler.

Professor Lewy has been on the faculties, in the departments of government, at Columbia University and Smith College and is now associate professor of government at the University of Massachusetts. He left Germany, where he was born, as a boy of fifteen, going first to Palestine and then to America after the Second World War. He began research for his book in 1960, and spent a year abroad, going through diocesan, state and institutional archives in Germany, as well as interviewing scores of people.

After his return from Europe, the Rockefeller Foundation gave him a grant for another year to allow him to search the archives in Washington. He returned to Germany recently for final research in the United States-Berlin Document Centre and the "Hauptarchiv" in the city.His articles "Pope Pius XII, the Jews and the Roman Catholic Church", which appeared recently in "Commentary", attracted wide interest.

Professor Lewy traces the rise of Hitler, the Church's role of neutrality in diplomacy, how the Concordat came into being and how the Church was entrapped. He details, step by step, the changing situation within the Church in Germany through the critical stages of Nazi ascendancy, and explains the bishops' attitude towards Hitler and the Nazi regime. He also refers to their relationship with Rome and their pronouncements on mixed marriages, Hitler's euthanasia programme and his foreign policy, and the fate of the Church party, its press and organizations.

The behaviour of the Catholic Church under Nazi rule was related to a number of specifically German conditions. Professor Lewy writes: The Church shared the widely prevailing sense of nationalism and patriotism, and she was affected by the same excessive respect for authority that did so much to hinder resistance.

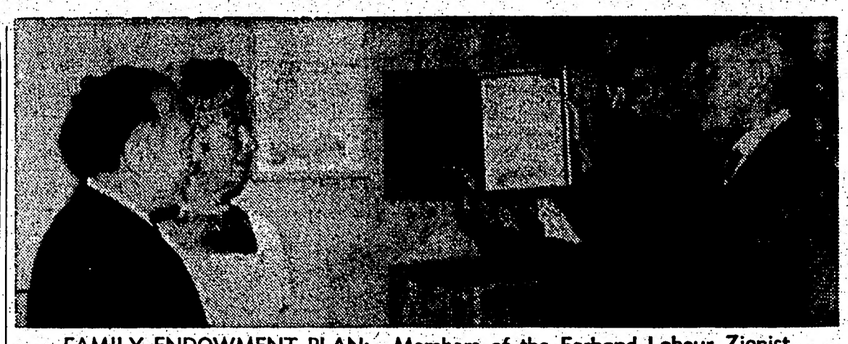
But more important, according to the author, the bishops and many of the lower clergy and parishioners concurred in certain Nazi aims.

"They welcomed the anti-Communism of the Nazis as a counterpoise to the liberal, anticlerical and atheistic tendencies of the Weimar Republic," he says. They were attracted by the National Socialist call for a strong state, a new German Reich that would again be a world power and able to solve the country's pressing economic and social problems."

All these factors added weight to the more general policies of the Church which have been noted in other situations of political crisis, Professor Lewy says. Most important, in his view, is the Church's strategy of neutrality and survival. "Much of Catholic political theory," he states, "is a matter of design that serves to pave the way for the Church's adjustment to different local situations."

Also, the Catholic Church does not demand of its followers that they be martyrs, Professor Lewy states. "Most of the Catholics, like human beings everywhere, are not heroes but merely want to live in peace. And it is doubtful whether the masses of the faithful in Germany of the 1930's and 1940's would have been prepared to follow a more radical leadership."

"However", Professor Lewy concludes, "if mankind ever again is faced with moral challenges of the enormity presented by Hitler's regime of brute force, we must hope that it will have better moral guidance. Man, taught the Renaissance humanist Pico della Morandola, has the power to degenerate into the lower, brutish forms of life. He has also the potential to reach the realm of wisdom and goodness. This is man's greatest burden. It is also his proudest distinction and glory."



FAMILY ENDOWMENT PLAN: Members of the Farband Labour Zionist movement met on June 22nd, at the home of veteran Histadruth leaders Mr. and Mrs. Jacob J. Zweig, in the interests of the Hebrew University's Family Endowment Plan. Guests on this occasion were Dr. Samuel B. Hurwich, now a resident of Israel, and Mr. Allan Bronfman, National President, Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University. EUROPE'S JEWS SEEK IDENTITY

The future for Judaism in western continental Europe looks extraordinarily bright, according to preliminary results of an exhaustive research project currently nearing completion.

The project consists of eleven separate studies, five of them dealing with French Jews whose numbers have doubled in the last 10 years (largely through immigration from North Africa) to roughly 500,000, or 72 percent of the total Jewish population of western continental Europe. It is being conducted jointly by l'Alliance Israelite Universelle de France, the American Jewish Committee and the Anglo-Jewish Association. Forty percent of its financing is through reparations from the West German government.

A survey of the as-yet-unpublished study's highpoints by the New York Times reveals some remarkably heartening and healthy trends among the 700,000 Jews encompassed by the investigations. For example, Jewish university students in Paris (where a half of all French Jews live) showed a strong desire to identify with Judaism and to learn more about its history and traditions, though they showed little knowledge of Jewish religious practice. Out of the 94 percent of Jewish students who said they considered themselves Jewish, two-thirds said their Jewishness was essential to them. Over half disapproved of conversion to other religions and three-quarters condemned attempts to hide Jewish origins.

Paris appears to be the only centre of dense Jewish population concentration. Elsewhere in Europe Jews are scattered rather thinly. Part of the aim of the study is to determine whether the latter wish to be brought into closer contact with each other and if they do, how to bring this about. The executive sponsoring organ, the Community Service, believes this knowledge is essential for community planning.

The Jewish communities of Stockholm, Amsterdam, Strasbourg, Basel and an unidentified Belgian city are being carefully investigated by the researchers with an eye to discovering reliable general principles that would be of great use in planned establishment of new Jewish communities in other areas deemed desirable by the study as a whole. The latter is expected to be published in about a year.

Toronto To Welcome Youth Tour

On the July 3-5 weekend, the Jewish Community of Toronto will welcome into its midst forty members of United Synagogue Youth aged 14-19, and their staff, who are spending the entire summer travelling through North America by bus.

The project is appropriately called 'Camp U.S.Y. On Wheels'. The young people, who come from every corner of the United States, will spend seven weeks viewing the natural splendor of the continent in a wholesome Jewish setting. They will visit outstanding Jewish communities, study their history, meet their leaders and their youth, and tour sights of Jewish interest past and present. Daily prayer and study will be an important aspect of the program.

Toronto, which enjoys an excellent reputation amongst Jewish centers in North America, is a "must" stopover. The group will be the guests of the Eastern Canadian Region of United Synagogue, specifically Adath Israel Synagogue, which will serve as the host congregation for the jam-packed weekend.

The excitement will begin the moment the young people arrive from Niagara Falls at 1.00 p.m. via the C.N.E. and the Gardiner Expressway. From the York and Front Street rendez-vous they will be whisked to the O'Keefe Center for a guided tour, possibly obtaining a glimpse of the stars of South Pacific who will be in dress rehearsal. Mayor Philip Givens receives the U.S. Y'ers at 2 p.m. in his office at City Hall and Alderman David Rotenberg will conduct a tour of the new City Hall.

The tour of Toronto will include the Parliament Buildings, the University of Toronto, the Henry St. Synagogue, (Beth Jacob Congregation), Casa Loma, Congregation Beth Tzedec, The Jewish Public Library, The Baycrest Home for the Aged, Shaarei Tefillah Congregation and the Associated Hebrew School.

Following preparations for the Shabbat in the homes of local U.S.Y'ers in walking distance of Adath Israel, the Shabbat phase of the weekend begins with services and the Friday night meal including a Dvar Torah and Zemirot. The feature address following the Seudah will be delivered by Mr. Ben Kayfetz, director for Public Relations Canadian Jewish Congress. Mr. Kayfetz, in keeping with the aim of the tour, will analyse the "History of the Jews in Canada and Specifically Toronto". An Oneg Shabbat with readings from Sholom Aleichem will conclude the day.

The Sabbath morning services will be entirely conducted by the U.S.Y.'ers, featuring a sermon entitled "13 years of U.S.Y." delivered by Alan Applebaum of Adath Israel. first vice president of the Eastern Canadian Region, U.S.Y. and the U.S.Y. liaison for this weekend.

The afternoon program will include an informal Seminar entitled "Kol Yisrael Chaverim" when both the local youth and the guests will compare and analyse their own communities from the Jewish standpoint. They will present the strengths and the problems of each community. This exchange of views and thoughts is aimed at strengthening the bonds between our people in every community and stimulate our sense of mutual responsibility.

The afternoon program, at 4.30 p.m. will feature a special U.S.Y. Rosh Chodesh Seminar conducted by the host Rabbi, Rabbi Erwin Schild who will analyse "The Concept of Independence in Jewish thought." This interesting topic will be related to the American Independence Day weekend of our U.S. guests.

During the Seudah Hashlishit "Zemirot Legacy" will feature the study of new zemirot in the spirit of "Shalosh Seedus". Following Havdalah an evening program on "American Independence" will be presented by the guest U.S.Y.'ers. The youngsters depart for Detroit on Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hollander and Mrs. Lee Diamond from New York serve as the expert staff members, for the entire 8 weeks tour. Mr. Joseph Cohen, Assistant Director of U.S.Y. coordinates the Wheels program from New York.

Mr. Pesach Schindler, Educational Director of Adath Israel Congregation is coordinating the Toronto Weekend. Mr. Bill Rotman of the Adath Israel Youth Commission serves as the adult-lay liaison and Mr. Joseph Grossman is chairman of Adath Israel Youth Commission.

July 3-5 shapes up as a weekend to remember. The Toronto Jewish Community will certainly welcome this unique group of summer travellers.

NEW HOSPITAL INSURANCE PREMIUMS
More people in Ontario receive better and more costly hospital care than ever before

On the average day some 56,000 patients — enough people to populate a city — are under care in hospitals of all types in Ontario. These patients are receiving skilled treatment which has never been equalled in the history of the province. Furthermore, the cost of medically-necessary hospital care is no longer a problem for over 98% of Ontario's residents who participate in their government-sponsored hospital plan . . . the plan that ended hospital-expense worries in Ontario.

BETTER CARE—HIGHER COST

For many years the cost of hospital care has been going up steadily, not only in Ontario but also in the rest of Canada and in other countries. Though costly, the advanced scientific facilities and special skills available in hospitals are essential in treating the sick. The quality of necessary hospital care cannot be sacrificed. Since 1959 the average cost to the Commission for one day of patient care has increased by approximately 50%.

WHY COSTS CONTINUE TO RISE

PRICES ARE UP
Hospitals, like everyone else, are paying more for salaries and wages, food, drugs, equipment, supplies and services.

About 70¢ of every $1.00 in hospital costs is used to pay hospital employees. Hospitals, today, have more and better-paid employees to serve more patients and provide essential round-the-clock care.

HOSPITALS ARE USED MORE
Greater use is being made of hospitals as medical science now provides many new, costly types of treatment which require admission to hospital. These procedures require more skilled staff, more facilities, drugs and other expensive supplies. Furthermore, there is no longer a financial barrier to necessary care, so more people obtain the care they need without being burdened by the cost. Also, there are increasing numbers of elderly citizens many of whom require prolonged treatment in hospital.

MORE BEDS AVAILABLE
In 1947, Ontario had only 17,473 active treatment, chronic and convalescent hospital beds; in 1958 there were 31,000. Today there are over 40,000 such beds available to insured persons and, by 1970, it is anticipated there will be 47,000. More beds mean more patients, more cost.
In addition, insured patients are entitled to care, without charge, in provincial mental hospitals (23,000 beds) and tuberculosis sanatoria (1,825 beds).

ADDITIONAL OUT-PATIENT SERVICES
Beginning July 1st, 1964 the following services will be included as out-patient benefits:

1) Hospital visits to complete treatment of fractures which were originally treated on an in-patient basis. (Previously, this benefit was only for fractures originally treated on an out-patient basis within 24 hours of an accident.)
2) Radiotherapy hospital services for the treatment of cancer in clinics of the Ontario Cancer Foundation and hospitals approved by the Commission for these services.
3) When prescribed by a licensed physician as a medically-necessary course of treatment and provided by hospitals approved by the Commission:
   a) Use of physiotherapy and occupational therapy facilities where available. Note: Consideration is being given to approval of other physiotherapy facilities at an early date. A further announcement will be made.
   b) Speech therapy where available and provided by qualified therapists for the treatment of an organic illness or injury.

Note: The above summary is for your convenience only. For detailed information please refer to the provisions of the Provincial and Federal Acts and Regulations respecting these matters.

NEW PREMIUM RATES
(Standard Ward Care)

Because of continued rising costs, the Provincial Government has announced increased premium rates for Ontario Hospital Insurance beginning with the regular advance payment to cover the benefit month of October, 1964. In 1961, 1962 and 1963 the Provincial Government prevented, by subsidy, a rise in premiums, In those years the Government contributed $125.8 million to the plan from general revenues. It also paid an additional $157.8 million for the care of patients in mental hospitals and tuberculosis sanatoria.

Even with the higher premiums the Provincial Government must continue to subsidize the cost of hospital care, and the Federal Government's contributions to the plan will also increase as the cost rises. (The cost of the plan does not include the Government grants which are paid to assist communities build their hospitals).

TARGET: ALL CASH IN BY AUGUST

Cash collectors geared for action

"There will be no slackening of effort during the summer months for the Cash Collection Committee of the Israel Bond Organization of Toronto," according to a decision taken at the special meeting of the Committee held at the Primrose Club on June 22nd. Immediate target of the Committee is to bring in all outstanding accounts from previous Bond drives by the beginning of August, so that Cash Collection efforts may then be concentrated on pledges made for the 1964 Campaign.

Chairman Jeffrey Cohen stressed the urgency of transmitting to Israel immediately all outstanding cash to enable the Government of Israel to proceed with vital development projects already begun — irrigation, housing for thousands of new immigrants, transportation, shipping, new industry and expanded agriculture.

A new era in the reclamation of the water-starved Negev began this year with the opening of the first phase of the irrigation system that brings water from the Sea of Galilee to the South. This engineering feat represents the most important single element in Israel's current development program, and is a dramatic example of the magnitude of the tasks which are being financed by Israel Bonds.

IN COMPARISON

The young man was very much put out with the schadchan (matchmaker).

"I'm surprised at you, introducing me to a girl homely as sin."

"Quiet, sha!" pleaded the shadchan, "next to my wife she's a beauty."

IT DOESN'T COUNT

A Jew appeared before his lawyer to dispose of some legal business.

"How old are you?" asked the lawyer.

"Fifty."

"May I see your birth certificate?" After scrutinizing it, the lawyer said: "According to this, you're not fifty, but sixty."

"With my troubles," said the Jew in self-defense, "how could you expect me to count the last ten years of my life?"

TOP BUSINESS

In an ultra-assimilationist Jewish family, the parents and six children were converted to Catholicism. Only the youngest, a son, refused to do likewise. When asked for an explanation, he replied:

"Conversion has become too much of a Jewish business."

the lively arts • By D. COHN

● Hollywood has started a new fad — that of constructing legitimate theaters with a capacity of at least 3,000, in the suburbs. They offer varied fare — classical concerts, Broadway shows, pop music, a little bit of opera. Some of the investors are Debbie Reynolds, Bob Hope, Janet Blair, Nat Cole, Tony Martin, Danny Thomas, Rhonda Fleming. The East may follow suit.

● Peter Sellers has no intention of retiring. He'll resume working — when the doctors set the date.

● Filling up his theater, the Royal Alexandra, by the gesture of free invitations with a pay-as-you-wish plan does not faze Toronto tycoon Ed Mirvish. In the long run, it's worth it, for like any other habit, this won't shake off easily once started. And eventually new patrons will pay more. The point is, getting them to go.

● Michael Belkin, young Jewish tennis star, who was born in Canada and now lives in Florida, plays at Wimbledon this week. He won the American junior championship two years ago at the age of 16.

The Jewish player likely to go furthest in the championships is Pierre Darmon, Tunisian-born French number one.

Another favorite is Abe Segal of South Africa.

● Moshe Atzmon, 32, young Israeli conductor, won first prize in the third International Conductors' Competition at Liverpool, England, last week. Another of the three finalists was 30-year-old Israeli Dahlia Atlas, only woman ever to enter the competition. She came out fourth.

● Johann Strauss' "The Gypsy Baron" is the latest in the chain of operettas cultivated by Sandler's Wells.

● In Rome, Giorgio Bassani, 48-year-old Italian-Jewish author of several best selling novels, has been appointed vice president of RAI-TC, the Italian State-owned nationwide radio and television network.

● Jackie Mason will do six guest-shots with Ed Sullivan next season, at $75,000 per.

● Rolf Hochhuth's controversial play, The Deputy, had Tel Aviv audiences in tears at its premiere last week. Among the audience at the Habimah Theater were survivors of Nazi death camps, leaders of the Jewish revolt in the Warsaw Ghetto, hundreds who lost relatives during Nazi rule in Europe. There was no applause at the end of the play, in a Hebrew version. The actors afterwards felt very depressed, and the atmosphere in general was one of Yom Kippur.

● Debbie Reynolds will get from hubby Harry Karl the $250,000 antique piano used in The Unsinkable Molly Brown.

● Dore Schary wrote a new play, One by One, which will be directed and produced by him in the fall.

● Eddie Fisher's new one-bedroom house in Beverly Hills has a bathroom-of-tomorrow: out in a cactus garden. A pushbutton gives him privacy.

● Julia Migenes has been signed for the musical, Fiddler on the Roof, due on Broadway in the fall, with Zero Mostel. The play is adapted from the Sholem Aleichem series.

● Dr. Max Brod, Franz Kafka's literary executor, flew to Prague this week from his home in Israel for his first visit since 1939. He was the principal guest at the opening of a Kafka exhibition at the Museum of National Literature. Kafka died in 1924 at the age of 41.

● In New York, Mr. Alex Rose, vice chairman of the Liberal Party and a well known union leader, has resigned from the board of directors of the New York World's Fair over the refusal of Mr. Robert Moses, president of the fair, to order the removal of a mural from the Jordanian pavilion.

The mural, without mentioning Israel by name, contains offensive phrases describing the "splitting of Palestine" and the ejection of Arabs who now are refugees.

The New York City Council has passed a resolution calling for the immediate removal of the mural.

● Max Newman, composer and conductor, flew from London to New York last Sunday on an important and exciting mission — to orchestrate his Requiem Mass which he dedicated to the late President Kennedy and which he will conduct at the Santa Cecilia Conservatorium in Rome.

Vienna born, Mr. Newman, slim, rubicund, 50, was, during the last war, the first Jew ever to conduct in the Vatican City.

● Finally the long debate in French artistic circles over the decision of M. Andre Malraux, the Minister of State for Culture, to replace the decorations on the ceiling of the French opera by frescoes painted by Marc Chagall, has ended.

Preparations for this work have already started and the architects will put up the frescoes next month.

IN MEMORIAM

ALDERMAN MOSS

Canadian Jewry shares the grief of the Jewish community in Great Britain upon the tragic and sudden death of Alderman Abraham Moss of Manchester who passed away several days after he was elected to the presidency of the Board of Jewish Deputies.

A former Lord Mayor of Manchester, Moss succumbed to a cerebral hemorrhage in his sixty-fifth year. He had won the Board's presidency only six days before, succeeding Sir Barnett Janner.

The new Board chairman, Solomon Teff, suddenly has been thrust into the exalted position of a world Jewish figure. We wish him and British Jewry well.

A FIRM ALLIANCE

ESHKOL IN FRANCE

Immediately following his triumphal tour to the United States, Premier Levi Eshkol's present visit to France is a denial of some rumormongers who question the prevailing status of the tacit France-Israel alliance.

The fact that France is resuming relationships with some Arab countries has given some news speculators the idea that there is something wrong between Israel and the French Republic.

Therefore it was a satisfaction to read Mr. Eshkol's statement on the eve of his departure for France to meet with President De Gaulle and Foreign Minister Couve de Murville — that the friendship with France remains the cornerstone of Jerusalem's international policy.

France's warm response should silence our pessimists.

PERTINENT REMINDER

ALIMONY JUDAISM

Last week at a Shaarei Tefillah dinner, Toronto's Rabbi Bernard Rosensweig coined a most proper term describing certain areas of Jewish charity and some philanthropists. While stressing the greatness of giving, of helping the needy, of organized charity, at the same time he deplored the development of a kind of Alimony Judaism. Said the Rabbi:

● There are charitable gentlemen who give money to Jewish causes as some pay alimony — they pay in order not to have to live with the woman.

The Rabbi emphasized the necessity of helping Israel and providing succor to Jewish communities the world over. But traditional Jews, he added, should remember that they are the Guardians of the Faith; that, no matter how wonderful and great our achievements for causes overseas may be, it is in the frontline for the preservation of Judaism at home that our future will be decided.

Speaking to Premier Levi Eshkol several weeks ago, Rabbi Joseph Soloveichik of Boston imparted a similar thought. Said the venerable Rabbi: Aliyah to Israel is important, but Aliyah towards Judaism is a precondition for any involvement with Israel.

Apparently, at a time when people discuss the Vanishing North American Jew, we ought ponder upon the implications of such pertinent reminders.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Extreme steps prove teachers' plight

Dear Editor: The advertisement "Toronto Hebrew Teachers Protest" evoked in me a sense of strong agitation and deep embarrassment. Hebrew teachers, by and large, are noted not only for their idealism, but also for the virtue of "Savlanut" — patience, endurance and forbearance. It seems to me therefore that only a genuine feeling of deep hurt and injustice can have aroused them sufficiently to resort to the unprecedented action of placing their grievance before the Jewish public through the press.

The Jewish community finds itself at this time in what I like to call a "crisis of freedom". We enjoy a new measure of equality, opportunity, affluence and the heady sensation of being fully accepted by our fellow citizens. In this condition of freedom and equality, there is no other safeguard against assimilation and subsequent extinction but the strength of our children's Jewish loyalties and convictions, and their personal attachment to Judaism which can be based only on knowledge and love.

The position of the Jewish teacher in the scheme of our survival is therefore of crucial importance. In order to equip our children for the inevitable confrontation with the non-Jewish world, we require teachers with the highest qualifications who can teach Judaism not only on an elementary but also on advanced and mature level. It is absolutely essential, therefore, that a career in Jewish education offers sufficient rewards to attract the very best and the most talented among our younger generation.

As long as the salary scales of Hebrew teachers remain at the present modest levels, it is vain to hope for an adequate supply of competent teachers in the future. It is a general fact of life in our society that the financial rewards of a job, profession or position, reflect its importance and prestige. By these standards, the salaries of our Hebrew teachers do not indicate that their decisive role in the community has been properly recognized.

Whether we like it or not, there is only one way in which society shows its esteem of a person's function, and that is through the "token" of liberal financial remuneration. If the leaders of our community want to demonstrate their sincerity when they extol the importance of a Jewish education, they must see to it that our Hebrew teachers enjoy a standard of living comparable to those key professions upon which the welfare of the community depends.

Toronto is justly renowned for the dignity and generosity with which Jewish education has always been supported. It is to be hoped that the excellent record of our community in assuming the financial burden of Jewish education will not be permanently marred by a prolonged dispute with the teachers on whom the ultimate success of education depends and who deserve financial benefits and social status commensurate with their function in Jewish life.

Your truly,
Rabbi Erwin Schild

Salaries should be more

Dear Editor: In connection with the recent protest of Toronto Hebrew teachers against a proposed salary freeze, I wish to express my deep concern about the point made that Hebrew teachers salaries are less than that of our public school teachers. Seeing that a Hebrew teacher works under more onerous conditions than his counterpart, his salary should be higher rather than lower when comparing with public school scales. Any teaching staff that is successfull in achieving a double program, namely both in Hebrew studies and the secular field, in the time normally allocated to a secular education only, deserves our admiration and tangible expression of this recognition.

May I urge the gentlemen charged with negotiating with the Hebrew teachers Alliance, to keep the aforementioned uupermost in their minds. It seems a pity that an affluent community such as ours should stand accused of niggardly treatment for those to whom we entrust the care of our most precious possessions — our children.

Day Schools Valued

Dear Editor: The leadership of United Jewish Welfare Fund in Toronto is to be congratulated on its recent decision to include the General Studies programme of the Day Schools in its subsidy programme. This move recognizes that the Day School Movement is one of the major hopes of our future Jewish community.

There are probably no stronger advocates of the Day School Movement than the teachers in it, or in the evening that the scheduled discussion with teachers re salaries is being shelved.

Our Hebrew School teachers have finally begun to earn recognition in Toronto as professionals with all that this term denotes. To have this unilateral freezout by Welfare Fund officials, without at least some discussion with the teachers, would be very detrimental to the most important element of our educational system — the teachers.

It is not for me to suggest what compromise solutions could be reached. I am sure that the teachers are also very much community-minded and Welfare Fund contributors themselves and would take everything into consideration. Nevertheless "freezeout" is a harsh word and should be replaced by formal discussions.

In this way the continued recognition of Hebrew School teaching as a desirable profession would go a long way to encourage young Canadian boys and girls, graduates of our day schools and evening schools, to consider this as a means of making an honourable living. For how long can we exist without the infusion of our own products? The European source is dried up and we should not use education to encourage emigration from Israel.

A frank discussion between Welfare authorities and the Hebrew Teachers' Alliance can only be beneficial to the cause that they both strongly believe in — Jewish education in Toronto.

"JEWISH CAPITALISTS"

WHAT NAZIS STARTED EAST GERMANY FINISHES

By Wolfram Daniel

Since the end of the war, every fifth inhabitant of Germany's Soviet Zone has fled to the West. Of the Jews living there, every second one has reported himself as a refugee. If there were still about 3,480 Jews in the Soviet Zone in 1945, their numbers had dropped to 1,710 by 1964. Several dozen Jews were among those who fled at the risk of their lives since the Berlin wall was built in 1961.

NO RESTITUTION

The Jews had their good reasons to turn their backs on Ulbricht's state. In 1952 came the first drastic anti-Jewish measures in the wake of the Prague Slansky trial. While reparation payments to individual Jewish citizens and to the state of Israel began in the German Federal Republic, the communists refused to return Jewish property confiscated by the nazis, which they had taken over as "state property." The Socialist Unity Party (SED) rejected all applications for the return of such property and began to talk of "Jewish capitalists."

DENIED DOCUMENTATION

Simultaneously, Ulbricht ordered all East German authorities to refuse any kind of official help to the Jews. They received no inheritance certificates or copies of official documents which they needed for the regulation of property questions in West Berlin or in the Federal Republic. Such documents were issued only then when the Jew "voluntarily" gave up his property to the state.

There were no reparations of any sort.

When the state take-overs began, Jewish manufacturers, tradesmen and farmers were among the first victims. The flight of many Jews was climaxed by the defection of three well-known Jewish SED functionaries, the State Secretary in the East Berlin Presidential Office, Dr. Leo Zuckermann, the President of the East Berlin Supreme Court, Dr. Hans Freund, and the President of Jewish communities in the Zone, Julius Meyer a deputy in the Volkskammer (East German parliament) and chairman of the organization "Association of the Persecuted of the Nazi Regime (VVN)."

PUPPET RABBI

Today, there are only nine synagogue communities left in the Soviet Zone, compared with 73 in the Federal Republic. On May, 15, 1961, Uubricht introduced the office of a chief state rabbi. Dr. Martin Riesenburger was given the post.

Riesenburger, after the break in relations between the Soviet Union and Israel at the beginning of 1953, had played the role in East Berlin of what the heads of the West Berlin Jewish community called a "pro-communist lay preacher." The West Berlin community refused to recognise him. In fact, Riesenburger was never able to obtain the signatures of three other rabbis, necessary to confirm him in office.

CONSTANT SURVEILLANCE

A few synagogues and Jewish cemeteries have been restored, but the ritual life of the Jews in the Zone is under constant surveillance. In Dresden-Blasewitz, they had to leave their community hall after they had removed a built-in microphone they had discovered there.

Secret police also keep a watch over the "Temple of Peace" synagogue in East Berlin's Rykestrasse, the synagogue concerts in Dresden, or the services in the new Erfurt synagogue.

At the same time, the SED slanders the state of Israel, uses expressions like "Jewish capitalist profiteers" and allows Goebbel's former assistant, Alwin Schaper, to hold a chief editor's post in the Soviet Zone press. During the war, Schaper wrote countless articles in which he talked about "Jewish blood-lust" and branded Jewry as the instigator of all wars.

DO JEWS DISCRIMINATE?

By David Levy

The report on American racial attitudes by two Chicago sociologists, just recently released, brought to light some very thought-provoking — and seemingly disquieting — facts about the Jews.

Donald J. Bogue and Jan E. Dizard, two sociology professors at the University of Chicago, began the study in 1960 and have since then examined detailed evidence gathered by interviewers who interviewed 721 Negro and 839 white families concerning their racial attitudes. The objective conclusions drawn by these two scientists are, therefore, not the kind to be lightly tossed aside.

What, then, are we to make of this startling paragraph in it?: "The Jewish population itself appears to have a rather high level of prejudice against other groups, especially with regard to Negroes and Puerto Ricans. In fact, Jewish respondents showed a greater level of prejudice toward others than others displayed toward Jews."

Obviously, detailed study of the report would be necessary in order to establish why this is so. But on general principles it is possible that it typifies a basic confusion over what is meant by discrimination and racial prejudice. What is taken for racial prejudice on the part of Jews is really something else — cultural prejudice. Unfortunately, the cultural level of U. S. Negroes and Puerto Ricans, in the mass, is low. This, of course, is at the bottom of the whole problem, and must be changed. But in the meantime, in rejecting some on account of their cultural backwardness, Jews appear to be rejecting them on account of the colour of their skin. This is an illusion that springs from the confusion over what prejudice is all about. When it comes down to it, the colour of a person's skin is of no more significance than the colour of a person's eyes. But education is another matter. It has a great deal to do with our relationships with our fellow man; and no people is more conscious of this fact than the Jewish people.

Jews, by their active participation in the campaign for civil rights in the United States have proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that they know where and how to direct their best efforts. The tragedy that has presumably befallen the three young civil rights workers in Philadelphia, Miss., two of whom were Jews, under circumstances of foul play, offers new, dramatic emphasis to this. The moving and eloquent wording on the application form for membership in the civil rights action group of one of the presumably murdered civil rights workers, Michael Schwerner, spoke of discrimination as "a devastating social evil", and reflected a hero's dedication to the cause of civil rights worthy of the bravest Jewish traditions.

But simply being chummy with uneducated Negroes, with people who, were they white, one would never bother with, is itself a form of racial bigotry because it persists in making an issue of the colour of a man's skin, which simply should never be an issue at all. Jews understand this instinctively. And any educated Negro will heartily agree that, in the final analysis, it is just as vicious to love a person for the colour of his skin as to hate him for it. Therefore Jews automatically refrain from indiscriminate chumminess with uneducated Negroes. Jews do discriminate — but only in respect of the alterable and improvable features of a given individual. That this shows up as something else and something uglier in the Bogue-Dizard report — at least, that it appears to at first glance — is too bad. But in the long run the essentially Jewish habit of accepting and rejecting people on the basis of who they are, not what label they carry or what the colour of their skin is, is far more important to the victory of civil rights than the superficial appearance of freedom from racial prejudice of people less concerned with cultural values than Jews are.

Dateline: NEW YORK

By Trude Weiss-Rosmarin

For the past six weeks the House Judiciary Committee (of the United States Congress) has been holding hearings on a proposed amendment which would set aside the Supreme Court decisions of 1962 and 1963 prohibiting prayers and Bible selections, even when non-denominational, in public schools. Under the Chairmanship of Congressman Emanuel Celler, the committee is considering the amendment proposed by Republican Congressman Frank J. Becker of New York, who proposes that non-denominated prayers and Bible texts be permitted for recitation on a voluntary basis.

As in the months and weeks preceding the crucial Supreme Court decision of June 25, 1962, which declared the non-denominational New York Regents' Prayer unconstitutional, Jewish defence organisations, notably the American Jewish Congress, and various national synagogue groups, including the Synagogue Council of America, are again engaged in opposing any measures that would tamper with what is generally termed the purist-fundamentalist interpretation of the First Amendment, which reads that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion."

While the Jewish "organisational policy" is definitely anti-school prayer, numerous prominent religious leaders and professors of all Jewish theological schools have gone on record in favour of a short non-denominational prayer at the beginning of the school day.

From the Lubavitcher Rebbe, who has issued a number of pastoral letters and declarations not only defending but demanding the institution of a suitable reminder of the existence of God as a religious-spiritual stimulant for all schoolchildren, to Rabbi Jakob J. Petuchowsky, Professor of Rabbinics at the Reform Hebrew Union College, there is a broad and articulate spectrum of Jewish theologians who, while not over-estimating the religious importance of a school prayer, are yet sufficiently alert and sensitive to the American temper to appreciate that the vast majority of American parents — and this also applies to Jews — do not look favourably upon what has been termed "the expulsion of God" from the schools.

Those in the Jewish community who advocate a common-sense attitude to the school prayer issue adduce evidence that, since the Supreme Court decision, there has been a definite increase of sectarian observances in many public schools, especially Christmas celebrations and the singing of Christmas carols on which the Supreme Court has not as yet given a decision. If an agreement could be reached on non-sectarian prayer and "reminders" of God, it might be easier to reach a compromise on excluding religious celebrations which cannot be shared by Jewish children.

Soviet govt. donates to Auschwitz monument

From the Jerusalem Post

While the Soviet delegation was conspicuous by its absence among the hundreds of delegations from all over the world at the unveiling of the monument to the Jewish victims of Treblinka at the death camp site on May 10, some weeks later the Soviet Ambassador to Poland Mr. A. Aristov, handed over 800,000 zlotys as his country's contribution to the erection of a similar monument to the victims of Auschwitz, Jewish and non-Jewish. The donation was received by a delegation headed by the Polish Minister of Culture.

The Ambassador also handed the delegation a personal letter from Prime Minister Nikita Khrushschev to the Secretary of the Committee of ed-Auschwitz inmates, the Polish writer Tadeusz Holwy, who stressed the role that armed resistance to the Nazis had played in the death camp. The foundation stone will be laid on the 20th anniversary of the liberation of the camp.

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

OF ZEAL AND ZEALOTS

The Israelites had been won over by the women of Moab and Midian to the licentious worship of Baal-Peor and the people was in danger of losing its faith. By an act of summary execution, Phineas the priest brought them back to their senses; and to this passionate deed the divine approval was given in the promise: "I give him my covenant of peace, because he was zealous for his God.".

Zeal is a quality that commends itself to us. We know that in the affairs of men fervent zeal, single-minded devotion to a cause, can achieve results which cool, calculating and balanced judment could never win. The zealous man overcomes opposition and surmounts difficulties, not so much by the force of argument, but by the fire of enthusiasm that he kindles in his fellows.

We admire the zealous; but "zealot" is a term of opprobrium which we associate with bigotry and fanaticism and persecution. The Zealots in the struggle of the Jews against the Romans did great harm and are not kindly remembered. The Inquisitors were zealots, as were the members of the Ku-Klux-Klan, as are the Neturei Karta of today. But how are we to distinguish between zeal and zealotry?

Is it a matter of degree, that the zealous man keeps his zeal within reasonable bounds while the zealot carries his partisanship to fanatical extremes? Hardly so, for then the distinction would be relative and uncertain, and where would we draw the line?

Is it that the zealous man directs his zeal to good causes and the zealot to evil ones? But the zealot claims that his cause is righteous; and this distinction would come to mean. "You are zealous when I approve your aims, but if I disapprove, you are a zealot" — unfortunately, an all too common, but quite unfair mode of judging.

Is it that the distinction between zealotry is a judgment that history makes on the conduct of men? But we cannot wait for the judgment of history when, in the situation which might face us, we want to know whether the man who seeks our support is a zealous man or a zealot.

Is not the distinction this? The zealous man keeps his hands clean. However great his enthusiasm, he will not stoop to falsehood or duplicity, to calumny or character-slaying, to torture or persecution, or to the many other wrongs which men have inflicted on their fellows in their fervid championship of causes. But the zealot will justify to himself any means in the pursuit of his ends. He is so blinded by his zeal, so vehement in his fanaticism, that all other human values, truth and mercy and reverence for life and personality, are sacrificed for the one value which he has made his goal.

This distinction is of more than academic importance. We should be happy to throw in our lot with the zealous, but we pray to be saved from zealots.

ANTI-SEMITISM STUDY PUBLISHED

West German Interior Minister Reports Progress Against Nazis

By HERMANN HOECHERL

West German Minister of the Interior

Hermann Hoecherl

The Ministry of the Interior has just published a report on last year's official findings as regards anti-Semitism and rightist radicalism in the Federal Republic of Germany. Earlier reports of this kind were hailed both at home and abroad, so that the Federal Government proposes to go on rendering public account now and then of the extent to which our democracy may be threatened from those quarters.

It is incumbent on the German people, having returned from a political and moral nadir, to be critically vigilant with respect to any remaining germ cells of the disease which brought them to that nadir. One of the purposes of the annual reports is to contribute towards this process of self-analysis.

A BASIS FOR JUDGEMENT

Another purpose of the reports is this: to provide all observers of postwar German developments with facts and figures. With the help of these it should be possible to judge whether or not the German people are to be believed in their avowal of allegiance to a democratic way of life. And this information should also make it easier to judge the truth or untruth of the accusations levelled at the Federal Republic of Germany from the Communist camp.

Anyone who compares the facts and figures of the present report with those of earlier ones will note that organized rightist radicalism is as motley and scattered as before. Nor have the membership figures of rightist organizations stopped shrinking. As their members grow fewer, their tendency to divide against themselves seems to increase, so that there are a considerable number of small rightist splinter groups.

NO POLITICAL FOOTHOLD

These groups are not able to break out of the confines set them by public disapproval or indifference. Their political argumentation is too transparent and stale to have any appeal for larger sections of the population. On each of the few occasions when such a group set up candidates in an election, it failed miserably. All the while, attempts to revive radicalism of the right in Germany are being made on the part of fascist groups in other countries, through the delivery of printed material or personal contacts.

There has also been a decrease in the number of anti-Semitic and pro-Nazi incidents involving paint-daubings, insults, desecration of cemeteries and the like. In 1963, 177 such incidents were observed, as against 205 in 1962 and 389 in 1961. At most 50 percent of such incidents are politically motivated, it has been found; in the remaining cases, the offences were committed by children or by mentally unbalanced or intoxicated persons.

None of this would deserve lengthy discussion were it not for certain trends of a different kind that have for some time been apparent in the rightist camp, and should not be underestimated in their dubiousness. Several periodicals and publishers, not mouthpieces of any organized group but representing nationalist extremism in their views, have been endeavouring to give topics of general interest a skilful slant of their own. The objective is to influence whole circles of the population who either no longer have or never have had any rightist inclinations, but have for years trusted in and voted for the democratic forces of our state.

EFFORTS TO DOCTOR HISTORY

Frequently the persons involved in this "campaign" held leading positions in the Nazi movement. They now misuse the historians' discussion of the causes of both world wars for excusing a regime whose historical guilt cannot reasonably be doubted. And apparently the long-range aim is to pave the way propagandistically for an all-out justification of National Socialism and its acts of terror.

This procedure is all the more irresponsible in view of the fact that a study of the causes of the wars is in itself necessary and legitimate. Nobody would deny the right of historians ever and again to re-assess the findings of research into the past. But what we decisively oppose is the exploitation of entirely doubtful historical theses by the enemies of a democratic order, for the purpose of undermining it and soliciting adherents for a dictatorship of the past.

We have not forgotten that it was by exploiting the war-guilt problem that an Adolf Hitler succeeded in tranferring his speech-making from the back rooms of small taverns to well-filled assembly halls. There are other topics as well that similarly lend themselves to exploitation for transparent political purposes. The danger exists that, by literary and journalistic falsification, the ideologies of rightist radicalism could be carried through the back door, as it were, into circles that have gone on record as adhering to basic democratic principles.

CONTINUING VIGILANCE

Meeting this danger requires not only the attention of the organs of the state and vigilance on the part of the press and other media of political information. It is a danger that also calls on the democratic parties, as well as all groups contributing towards the shaping of the political will of the people, to do everything in their power to keep such ideologies from penetrating into the consciousness of the electorate, in particular of the young.

The spokesmen of rightist radicalism also have the habit of setting themselves up to be the sole remaining guardians of the Germans' love of homeland and national consciousness. In this they benefit from certain long-range developments since World War II: After the breakdown of 1945, many Germans, in particular the younger generation, tended not only to believe that the era of nationalism was past and done with, but also that there could no longer be any meaning in terms such as "love of homeland" or "national consciousness", so greatly had these concepts been debased. Now — 20 years later — the German people are beginning to bethink themselves again of their national values. They are becoming aware again of venerable traditions of freedom, of which there is no lack in their country's history. Love of homeland is no longer an empty phrase, not even to the very young. Since this is so, it becomes all the more important to make two things clear to the proclaimers of an outdated nationalist ideology One is that in our state only he has the right to call himself a patriot who adheres to and helps promote the fundamental order of a free democracy which those Germans who were free to do so have chosen as the kind of society in which they want to live. The other is that patriotism in this sense involves the readiness to defend that fundamental order of a free democracy against its enemies.

What Is Intellectual Maturity?

the case for talmudic studies

By Rabbi N.L. RABINOVITCH

Education is now high on the list of public concerns. Many believe that it should be first, because the rapid changes our society is undergoing demand ever increasing aptitudes and, above all, adaptability.

It is now universally acknowledged that elementary education alone is not sufficient to enable one to function fully in the modern world. Elementary education provides certain basic skills such as reading and writing, for example, and fundamental emotional attitudes and habits. However, the crying need is for more advanced training which will develop intellectual maturity and independence.

But what, precisely, is meant by these two goals? The ability to maintain emotional balance under stress, to examine critically every situation that arises, to think out for oneself the problem at hand, to overcome the mental sluggishness which restrains one from seeking new frontiers of knowledge, and to give impetus to one's natural curiosity by translating it into love of learning — these are certainly some of the ingredients of intellectual maturity and independence. They are the qualities modern man needs most.

GOALS OF EDUCATION

As Jews, the problems of education are especially important to us. For us, education not only serves to prepare the individual to function in the modern technological world. It also endows him with Jewish loyalties, and above all give him the tools to apply the specific concepts of Judaism in a culture where the purely human element is rapidly being superseded by the machine. Our material world is being progressively dehumanized, and the need is greater than ever for the spiritual values which make life worth living.

The historical experience of our people offers invaluable insights into the educational problems which are now of general concern. The Jewish people is unique in that it developed the resiliency and adaptability to live and to maintain its creative individuality under the most radically differing circumstances, amidst alien cultures of widely varying levels. In these critical times, when the whole world is desperately seeking these same qualities in order to enable civilization to survive under the awesome tensions of the nuclear age, a long look at the distinguishing features of Jewish education through the ages has much to offer us.

TALMUD THE TRADITIONAL MEASURE

The historic measure of the vitality of any Jewish community has always been the degree to which Talmudic studies were pursued there. This is a simple fact of history and it demands our attention.

The Bible always provided the great ideas and ideals which inspired Jewish life and through it the whole world. But it was the Talmud which developed the ways of thought and the forms of living in which the biblical ideals could be realized. Without the Talmud, the Karaite community, for example, lost that suppleness and freshness, which kept Jewry viable.

What is the goal of all Talmudic studies? By a sharp dialectical process, the critical faculty is aroused and cultivated; the adventure and the thrill of mental gymnastics are the by-products of progress on the road to truth; and the student's confidence in his own reasoning powers is reinforced, while being kept in sane perspective, by the knowledge that all wisdom comes from God. In short, what we call today intellectual maturity and independence, are the hallmarks of the genuine Talmid Chacham.

DOING THE WHOLE JOB

Unless Jewish education is sustained long enough to impart the qualities of the Talmid Chacham, we will be remiss in our duty to our children. We should be denying them, God forbid, the greatest contribution that Judaism can make to their lives as individuals and through them to the whole world.

On the other hand, given the tremendous challenges facing our young people, the sooner they learn to think for themselves and seek knowledge for its own sake, the greater is the chance that the total educational process will be a success. Naturally, advanced training cannot be given before a foundation of basic skills has been acquired. But, subject to that limitation alone, the early introduction of Talmudic studies has always marked the ideal Jewish curriculum.

TORONTO DAY SCHOOLS

Toronto Jewry is justly proud of its fine day schools and their wonderful accomplishments, although regretably only a small fraction of our Jewish school children get a day-school education. However, we should be especially proud of the truly remarkable program of intensive Talmudic studies in the Eitz Chaim School. In the fifth grade, students are introduced to the world of the Talmud, and before long they spend ten hours a week in addition to all their other Hebrew subjects, stretching their minds and gaining knowledge and insight by delving into the breadth and depth of the vast Talmud. It is here that the unique and the vital contribution of Jewish education is made to the urgent needs of our times. To support and to expand this program should be regarded as a primary community responsibility.

bond meet july 2

Leaders of Toronto's Landsmanshaften will convene their first community-wide Israel Bond Conference at Shaarei Shomayim Synagogue on Thursday evening, July 2nd, in preparation for their intensive participation in the forthcoming Israel Bond Campaign in Toronto. Under the Chairmanship of Louis J. Zuker, an increasing number of Fraternal Organizations undertook individual Bond drives during the 1963 Campaign and were directly responsible for a significant increase in the number of Israel Bond purchasers throughout the community. This year it is anticipated that campaigns will be undertaken in each and every Landsmanshaft group, rallying to the cause of Israel's economic upbuilding by providing Israel Bond capital for the government's development program.

SYD APPLEBAUM, a former Torontonian now serving as Director of the Overseas Division of the Office of Prime Minister Levi Eshkol, and the Prime Minister's Public Affairs Secretary is presently in the United States and will make a special visit to Toronto in order to address the Landsmanshaften Conference. The noted journalist and radio news commentator is in an unique position to bring a message of importance to the Conference on the latest developments in Israel, and it is expected that a capacity audience will be on hand to greet and hear Mr Applebaum.

ABRAHAM ENGEL, for the past four years, Administrative Assistant of the Jewish Community Council of Ottawa, has joined the staff of the State of Israel Bond Organization of Toronto. Mr. Engel was born and educated in Montreal, at the Montreal Talmud Torah, Herzliah Hebrew High School and Sir George Williams University, and is a fluent linguist in Yiddish, Hebrew, French and English. Mr. Engel's interest in Zionism began in his childhood, and he has been an ardent worker in those causes dedicated to the upbuilding of the State of Israel. In his new post, Mr. Engel is assigned to serve as Israel Bond liaison with Toronto B'nai B'rith Lodges, and with synagogues and Landsmanshaften throughout the community.

South Pacific Coming To O'Keefe

"Some enchanted evenings" are in store for audiences at O'Keefe Centre for the 3-week run commencing July 6, when the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical play SOUTH PACIFIC, with no less than TWO Pulitzer Prizes to its credit and its record of nearly five years on Broadway, and with Dorothy Collins and Gene Hollman starring in the roles of the Navy nurse and middle-aged French planter involved in its war-time romance.

SOUTH PACIFIC has the extraordinary honour of two Pulitzer Prizes through the award having first been given in 1948 to the book of loosely-connected short stories by James Michener called "Tales of the South Pacific", as the best novel of the year, and through the award having been given in 1950 to the musical play made principally from two of the stories in the book, as the best stage attraction of the year.

Though generally regarded as a "Rodgers and Hammerstein" musical, the authorship of SOUTH PACIFIC is not only to be credited to the brilliant team of Richard Rodgers & Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, who put together such hits as OKLAHOMA!, CAROUSEL and THE KING AND I but also to Joshua Logan, co-author of MISTER ROBERTS and other palys, since Logan collaborated with Hammerstein in writing the libretto.

SOUTH PACIFIC tells the story of a Navy nurse from Arkansas who falls in love with a much older French planter on a Pacific Island during the war, and also of a young Marine Lieutenant's poignant attachment to a native girl, which is wrecked by the prejudice of his Main Line and Priceton backgrounds. Both romances are touched with the accents of two worlds meeting, of alien individuals thrown together in a remote part of the earth against the background of war's boredom and violence.

Between the nurse from Little Rock, Arkansas, painfully aware of her provincialism, and the planter who had exiled himself from Paris to the South Seas island, lie not only the differences of their backgrounds, but also the difference in their ages, since she is young, and he is not. All the same she is able to sing of him the glorious "I'm in Love with a Wonderful Guy", (and later to decide, but only momentarily, "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair") and he sings of her what has been called one of the greatest of American love songs "Some Enchanted Evening". In addition to Dorothy Collins & Gene Hollmannas this pair caught up in their wartime idyll, the cast will include David Chaney as the lieutenant struggling against another kind of prejudice in his love with a Tonkinese girl, Eleanor Calbes as the dainty Tonkinese, Honey Sanders as her raucous mother who beckons on the lieutenant with her haunting paean to a tropical island. "Bali H'ai", Bill McDonald as the "big-operator Seabee always intent on swinging a deal, Art Jenoff and Dick Ensslen as big Navy brass.

The production, presented by Lester Osterman Productions, is being directed by Joe Layton familiar to O'Keefe Centre theatregoers for his direction of NO STRINGS and THE GIRL WHO CAME TO SUPPER.

OTTAWA DRIVE FOR OLD AGE HOME

OTTAWA — The Ottawa Jewish Community has launched a $300,000 campaign to aid in the construction of Hillel Lodge — A Jewish home for the aged in the capital.

The two-storey structure will be located at 193 Wurtemburg Street, facing a city-owned park, and with the Rideau River flowing at the back of the property.

Total cost of the structure is estimated at $500,000 — including purchase price of the property.

The initial structure will house 25 elderly citizens plus staff, but plans provide for future expansion as needed.

The official sod-turning ceremony is scheduled for the early part of July, and construction will start in mid-July. The building was designed by Ottawa architect Sidney Lithwick. Bids have been called for in the first step of actual construction.

Heading the campaign committee is Gilbert Greenberg. Serving with him on the campaign executive are J.C. Horwitz Q.C. president of the Lodge committee, Joe Feller, Hy. J. Harris, and Ben Levin — plus the directors.

The admissions committee will be under Dr. Samuel Mirsky, to screen all applicants to determine the need, which shall have the highest priority. The Lodge has been accepted as a member agency of the United Fund of Ottawa.

The start of the Lodge to house the elderly members of the Jewish community, is a dream of nine years come true.

For it is almost nine years ago to the day, that the idea of an old home for the Jewish aged of the city was first conceived by Mrs. Abraham Lithwick and Mr. Horwitz who organized a membership drive.

The interest of the Jewish community in the project is reflected in the present membership of over 1,300 persons, who have been actively supporting the organization since its inception.

Completion of the Lodge is expected in about one year.

Fees for admission will be on a sliding scale in accordance with the means of the applicants. Those who can afford it will pay the per diem charge — plus a small surplus of 10 per cent which will be held in trust for future expansion.

All others will pay according to their means — or be given free accommodation if the circumstances warrant it. There will be no call on applicants to turn over capital — as is still the case in several such homes.

History was relived at Upper Canada Village, near Morrisburg, last Saturday when a replica of an early steam locomotive made its inaugural trip along the north shore of the St. Lawrence River. The Loyalist — a model of the wood-burning, smoke-belching, high-stackers which hauled passengers, freight, and mail one hundred years ago — made its first official trip following a ceremony in which the traditional golden spike was hammered in by the Minister of Tourism and Information, The Honourable James Auld. Throughout the summer, the Loyalist will carry passengers on a two mile round trip from Upper Canada Village through beautiful and historic Crysler Park.

Worried Over Parents

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: After the report came out about how smoking causes so many chronic diseases, I thought my parents would stop smoking, but I was wrong.

My mother said if she stops smoking she would start eating and would get heavy, so which is the lesser of the two evils?

I have tried hiding the cigarets and throwing them out, but nothing works. I wouldn't want anything to happen to my parents because I love them very much. They don't have enough will-power to stop on their own. I'm 13.

ANSWER: When a child expresses such loving concern as you have, it is a heart-warming experience.

The thought of losing a parent is always an unhappy one, especially during the growing years when a youngster is still dependent. It engenders the ancient infantile fear of being abandoned and left to one's own feeble devices. The motivation behind the desire to help your parents is thus a healthy desire to protect yourself. To love another fully, one must begin by liking oneself.

In times of stress, people revert to childish forms of behavior. When hungry, the little infant will suck his thumb until he is given the bottle or the breast. Having learned how gratifying it is, the older child, too, will do the same, when frightened or tired.

In the more grown-up years, on a deeper level of gratification, smoking sometimes serves as a substitute for thumb-sucking.

Giving up smoking or going on a diet are known to be easier when life is comparatively happy and peaceful and when the individual feels fulfilled and worthy. Also, loving life enough, one can give up a present pleasure for a future gain, and so live longer.

You must realize that to hide the cigarets is an open invitation for the person to go and find them. Parents sometimes use this method to withhold things from a child. However, it teaches the child nothing, except that it is a kind of hide and seek game.

To throw the cigarets out is to take on authority and responsibility that is not yours.

Furthermore, any behavior on your part that increases tension and dissension might lead to increased smoking to seek relief.

If you were to take on some of the household chores, which always seem more difficult and tiring at the end of a mother's day, it might really permit your mother to begin to relax. She might then not reach for a cigaret.

During the first weeks when a person gives up smoking, she may become very irritable and impatient. Her impatience is, to some degree, with herself for still wanting to go back to smoking.

When people give up one form of mouth satisfaction, like smoking, they will often substitute another form, like eating. The pounds that a person puts on can be lost very quickly, however, once cigarets have definitely been given up.

Your loving concern for your parents, manifested in practical ways, will help fill up the void and the frustrations created by giving up smoking.

Give them time to make their own decision. Extend to your parents the same patience and understanding that you want from them.

GENIUS

By RUTHIE

What a relief — school's over! And I don't mean for the kids. I mean for me.

Avahda (of course) they suffered. Cramming for an exam, trying to memorize about three-hundred-and-fifty pages in one night is no picnic.

* * * *

But could you just imagine the sheer torture of a hundred-million parents?

You couldn't even tiptoe through the house. And if you so much as breathed, you were told — or better — yelled at:

"Keep quiet! I can't concentrate."

Television? Who heard of such a thing? If you turned on the radio to get the weather report, there went the threat:

"Okay! If I flunk, it will be your fault."

* * * *

That's before exams. You think it's better after? A nekhtigen tug (yesterday's day)!

For days all you hear is:

"Wonder if I passed. My average up to now is good. But if anything pulls it down ...

"Why do I have to go to school anyhow? I could sew, I could take up modeling, I could learn to be a manicurist ... I could ... I could ... I could.

"That math! A stinkaroo! I couldn't even answer all the questions, and goodness knows what I did with those I answered.

"It's not fair. All night I stayed up studying. So what happens? We get just what I didn't go over."

You're in for so much complaining, you don't know whether to sympathize or scream:

"Serves you right. You should have studied all year, not have nonsense on your brain."

"But I did," comes back the whine.

And the dialogue goes on forever, till you're ready to down a whole bottle of aspirin at one time.

Yet who can blame them much? Of course every subject studied must be mastered. Still, we all don't possess the same talents.

My nemesis, for instance, was math. And you know what? I still can't count straight beyond three figures.

You should see when I get some spending money besides my weekly allowance! It goes into another compartment of my wallet. I start out fine, but somewhere along the line something crosses.

I hold both sets of bills in each hand. Suddenly it occurs to me that I need eight dollars to cover the milk bill. In one hand are a couple of twenties; in the other, some fives, tens and maybe a single. I juggle them together. Result? I don't have eight dollars, but I do have confusion. I can't remember in which hand I held the money for the house nor in which I had the extra. It finally comes out that one hand owes the other — and I can't remember which.

So go blow at the kids. Some day they'll be able to make baby formulas, regardless. And that, to every mother, is what counts.

WOMEN'S STATUS HIGHEST IN ISRAEL

Israel leads the world in the percentage of women in politics, according to a recent issue of London's Sunday Times magazine.

In a detailed survey of the relative advances made by women in public life in 15 countries, writer Godfrey Smith says: "Perhaps Israel, with its 10 percent female representation, its two women Deputy Speakers and its distinguished Foreign Minister, Mrs. Golda Meir, is the most progressive."

There are 12 women in the Israeli Knesset and 120 men. In Canada there are four women in the House of Commons, as against 261 men, and six in the Upper House as against 96 men.

The survey by Smith, while discussing various general ramifications of the whole subject, fails to point out that the Israeli record is all the more remarkable considering the strict isolation of women from public life under Orthodox Judaism while the latter is generally thought to exercise a dominating influence in Israeli life.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

CHERRY ROLL

2¼ cups sugar
2 cups water
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons butter
About ¾ cup milk
3 cups sour pitted cherries
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon softened butter.

Combine 1½ cups sugar and water and simmer 5 minutes. Pour into 8 x 12 x 2-inch pan. Mix and sift flour, baking powder, salt and ¼ cup sugar. Cut in nearly all of the butter; add enough milk to make a moderately soft dough. Place on floured board and roll about ½-inch thick. Spread with softened butter. Cover with cherries and sprinkle with combined sugar and cinnamon. Roll as for Jelly roll. Cut in 1½-inch pieces and lay cut side up in syrup. Bake about 25 minutes in hot oven (425 degrees), basting two or three times with syrup. Yields 5 to 6 servings.

Toronto Women

● At the closing meeting of Bruria Chapter, Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi Women, which was held recently, the following officers were reelected: Mrs. J. Applebaum, president; Mrs. E. Horenfeldt, treasurer; Mrs. S. Abella, secretary.

● Adath Israel Sisterhood held a board planning meeting recently, which was opened by Mrs. Henry Rosenberg, newly installed president. Mrs. D. Seltzer pronounced the D'Var Torah. Minutes of the previous board meeting were read by Mrs. S. Gladstone; Mrs. N. Feiman, read the correspondence. Mrs. Rosenberg introduced the four vice presidents: Mesdames J. Bass, B. Kaplan, D. Silverman, H. Solomon. Because of the absence of Mrs. H. Tinianov, responsibilities of the board members were related by Mrs. J. Bass. The following chairmen gave their reports: Mrs. B. Applebaum, installation; Mrs. R. Kay, sisterhood project; Mrs. H. Solomon, donor, Mrs. B. Kaplan, ceremonial and gift shop; Mrs. J. Wayne, tea; Mrs. D. Seltzer, adult education; Mrs. S. T. Warren, program; Mrs. S. Shain, publicity; Mrs. G. Starr, Sisterhood school relations; Mrs. B. Blidner, Monday afternoon bowling; Mrs. J. Bass, convention; Mrs. M. Garber, Wednesday evening bowling. Mrs. J. Patter and her committee served refreshments.

The lone woman was right

FRANKFURT (JCNS) — Because Hungarian police had refused to let a transport of Jews cross the border out of Hungary in 1944 and it had returned, the 1,200 Jewish inmates of Kistarcza internment camp believed they were safe.

But one woman in the transport did not believe that the Germans would give in and she was right. A few days later the S.S. sent all the inmates of the camp, which had been under Hungarian command, to Auschwitz.

The woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Szenes, a Jerusalem journalist, gave this evidence at the trial here of ex-Lieut.-Col. Herman Krumey and exS.S. Captain Otto Hunsche, who deny charges of helping Eichmann to send 430,000 Hungarian Jews to Auschwitz in 1944.

The testimony of Imre Reiner, a former member of the Budapest Judenrat, who died in Montreal last year, was then read in court. This stated that Eva Ferchow, Krumey's former secretary in Budapest, had been responsible for the deportation of Jews and that she had foiled several of Reiner's attempts to rescue Jews.

Ferchow said the accusations were untrue.

Joel Brand, an Israeli author, who appeared as a witness in the trial, said here that the court was ignoring the part played by Krumey and Hunsche, as members of Eichmann's "Jewish Affairs Department", in implementing the Nazi plans to exterminate the Jews.

He told a meeting of the Carl-Duisberg-Gesellschaft that the trial was being conducted in such a way that many facts disclosed by witnesses would be lost for historic research.

The trial, in contrast to the Auschwitz trial, was highly political in character. The "murder machinery of the Nazi State and the criminal activities of the murderers at the writing desk" were the main points of the accusations, he said.

Brand negotiated with Eichmann in the Nazi plan to exchange one million Jews for 10,000 Allied lorries.

While continuing his profession as a newspaper writer (all his life he refused to become a salaried Jewish official) he placed himself at the disposal of the Zionist movement. Till his death he was considered the greatest orator Zionism ever produced. He was a linguistic genius, speaking and writing with equal ease English, French, German, Hebrew, Yiddish, Italian, Spanish besides his native Russian. He was the recognized spiritual leader of an entire generation of Russian Jewish intelligentsia, says his biographer Benjamin Akzin, now a professor at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

In the years preceding World War I, he was entrusted with political work by the World Zionist Organization and conducted negotiations with the Turkish government. He led the fight for Zionism in Russia, for the revival of Hebrew, for the organization of Jewish self-defence against pogroms, for individual equality in the Czarist empire and for national minority rights in Russia. Till his death he was the idol of Zionist youth, even those who opposed his political ideas, because of his unquestioned integrity and idealism.

He predicted the eclipse of the Ottoman Empire and the victory of the British in World War I, and because of this organized the first Jewish military unit in 1915, known as the Zion Mule Corps which was sent to Gallipoli by the British.

Not satisfied with partial success, he went to London where he agitated for the organization of full-fledged Jewish regiments within the British Army to be sent to the Palestine front. Though the majority of Zionist leaders opposed him, insisting that Jews remain neutral in the war, Jabotinsky went ahead with his plans and in 1917 the British government consented to the formation of the Jewish battalions, Jabotinsky himself enlisted, was soon promoted to lieutenant, took part in the fighting in the Jordan Valley, was decorated by the British and mentioned in dispatches.

His first clash with the British came in 1919 when he insisted that the Jewish Legion be kept as an armed force in Palestine in order to help establish a Jewish National Home and Jewish mass immigration. Other Zionist leaders took a lighter view of the security problem in Palestine, and there was no Jewish opposition to the demobilization of the Jewish forces.

In the meantime the British began their policy of divide and rule, encouraging Arab opposition to a Jewish homeland. He was the organizer of the Haganah, from which the Israeli army later sprang. For this act aimed at self-defence he was sentenced to 15 years hard labour by the British. Following worldwide protest, he was pardoned and expelled from Palestine which he was forbidden to re-enter under the entire period of the British mandate.

Jabotinsky's militancy eventually brought about the breach between him and other Zionist leaders. Leading the largest Zionist party within the World Zionist Organization, he quit the movement and established the New Zionist Organization known as the Revisionists. He settled in London where he concentrated on a Zionist policy of alliances aiming at winning the support of those governments interested in solving the Jewish problem. He then proclaimed the "evacuation plan" in order to bring mass immigration to Palestine. He also organized the so-called illegal immigration.

In early 1940 he began a campaign in New York to establish a Jewish army to fight Hitler and a united Jewish representation during the war and for future peace negotiations. There he developed angina pectoris and died suddenly from a heart attack on August 3, 1940, while addressing Zionist youth at Camp Betar in Hunter, New York.

PROFESSOR PLEDGED TO ARAB-ISRAEL PEACE

FLORENCE (JCNS) — Professor Giorgio La Pira, the Mayor of Florence, told delegates here at the Fourth Mediterranean Colloquium of his "indestructible" intention to hold a "round table" with Arabs next January, and a Fifth Colloquium in June, 1965, entirely devoted to Israel-Arab relations.

M. Daniel Mayer, the former French Minister of Labour and president of the League of the Rights of Man, deplored the absence of the Arabs at this year's colloquium. He also suggested that Professor La Pira addresses an appeal to Pope Paul on behalf of the conference, advocating the fulfilment of the late Pope John's promises of an improvement in relations with the Jews, including the eradication of charges of deicide. This was agreed to by Professor La Pira.

The Deputy Mayor of Nazareth, Mr. Zu'bi, outlined the achievements of Israel's Arab minority. The acquisition by Israeli-Arab war is imminent, but the best bridge for future Israeli-Arab understanding, he said.

"I don't believe that an Israeli-Arab was is imminent, but a moral solution of the refugee problem is necessary without creating tragedies for others," he declared.

The colloquium then approved a resolution urging better conditions for all minorities in the world in order to foster the East-West "detente" and to "allow everybody, without impediment, the free exercise of all forms of religious and cultural life."
